

Name:

Date:

www.rainforestconcern.org

Help the Longnose Harlequin Frog find its habitat

What is a Longnose Harlequin frog?

The Longnose Harlequin frog is a species in the Bufonidae frog family. It lives in a small area of terrestrial freshwater in Ecuador. They are found in lowland and montane tropical rainforests.

The Longnose Harlequin frog was thought to be extinct however has now been rediscovered with the help of Rainforest Concern. Some of the threats this species face include general climate change, pollution and habitat loss.